

Tips for Writing a College Application Letter

- Do your homework. Find out about the colleges you are applying to. What are their strengths? What are they best known for?
- Explain why you want to attend this particular college. What attracted you to it? Try to be specific.
- Highlight your academic excellence. Make sure you talk about the special qualities you have to offer.
- Feel free to share the unique benefits you received and qualities you possess because of homeschooling
- Don't forget to mention any special awards you have received, especially if they relate to your chosen field of study.
- Check, double check and even triple check your spelling and grammar. It would also be a good idea to have 2-3 other people proofread your letter before you send it.

Dear Admissions Board,

After reviewing different universities, I have discovered that MyChosen University has a strong creative writing program. I am excited about the possibility of joining your program and helping to further that reputation.

I have been writing my own stories since I was very young and have won several writing contests and awards. Writing comes as naturally to me as breathing. I can't imagine doing anything else with my life. As a homeschooler, I've had more opportunity to hone my writing abilities than most students.

I have always been a good student while balancing my homeschool assignments along with courses from our local community college as a dual enrolled student. I've also kept busy by volunteering my free time at our local library. I just love being around books!

Included is my transcript, application, letters of recommendation, and essay as requested in the application packet. Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,
Happy Homeschooler
